Pola Antebi, Senior Vice President, Specialist Head of the Chinese Ceramics & Works of Art Department, Christie's, commented: "This season's sales of Chinese Ceramics and Works of Art totalled HK$371million, an increase of 15% over the Spring 2009 season. The sale's strong focus on works of impressive provenance, including a number from well-known collections, and many items being offered at auction for the first time, attracted bids from all over the world. There was active participation in the sale room in Hong Kong, on the phone and online through Christie's LIVE.

The sale of Important Chinese Lacquer from the Lee Family Collection, Part II totalled over HK$90million (US$11.6million) and was 87% sold by lot, 95% sold by value. Works from this much-respected collection attracted tremendous pre-sale interest from collectors around the world, who were eager to acquire museum-quality pieces which had been selected with enormous care over a 30 year period by one of the most knowledgeable collectors in this field, K.T. Lee. Enthusiastic bidding came from a range of international clients, with noticeable participation from established collectors in the West. Among the impressive prices achieved is that for the top lot of the day, a magnificent carved cinnabar lacquer square tray depicting figures in a landscape from the Ming dynasty, Hongwu reign (1368-1398). Superbly carved and formerly in the collection of Sir John Figgess, this work fetched HK$25.3million (US$3.3million), a record for a cinnabar lacquer tray. An outstanding and extremely rare Yuan dynasty (1279-1368) mother-of-pearl inlaid octagonal box and cover sold for HK$20.8million (US$2.7million), establishing a world auction record for a Chinese mother-of-pearl inlaid lacquer.

The sale of Important Chinese Ceramics & Works of Art that followed totalled HK$281million (US$36.4million). International bidding was noticeable throughout all collecting categories, with participation from Mainland Chinese clients even more prominent this season - by comparison with Autumn 2008, the number of successful Mainland Chinese buyers increased 63%. Among the sale's most sought-after works were important ceramics made for the Qing court- a collecting category that is a perennial favourite with today's collectors. Works of significant provenance performed extremely well, as evidenced by the superb white jade buffalo from the Qianlong period (1736-1795) formerly in the collection of the famous Dutch industrialist and collector Hugo Tutein Nolthenius which sold for HK$20.8million (US$2.7million). The well-established provenance of this work, combined with its freshness to the market, helped ensure that this delightful sculpture was the highest sold jade in the sale. Another example of the importance of provenance can be seen with the two rare imperial gilt-bronze ritual bells from the Kangxi period that more than tripled their high estimate to sell for HK$16.43million (US$2.1million). Formerly in the Thomas B. Clark Collection, these bells were acquired by the Trevor family of New York in 1925."
